COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known dewntown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been appliedit's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

PLAN EDUCATION TO KEEP BONDS OFF MARKET AMERICAN FORCE

Out of Maze of Crowding Military Events Dashing Assaults of Yanks Shine Brightly as Truth Is Known. 21 DIVISIONS CAUSED

DEFEAT FOR GERMANY Battle of Argonne Or Meuse in Reality the Sedan Which Resulted in Final Crushing of Enemy Forces. PARIS, Nov. 18. (By the Associated

PARIS, Nov. 18. (By the Associated Press.)—Out of the confusion and dage of the crowding military events on the western lattle line since late in September, when battle followed battle until from Flanders to Verdun there was ceaseless action, it is now permissible to outline to a certain extent the part played by the American armies in the final decisive battle of the war, which ended with the armistice of last Monday.

which ended with the armistice of last Monday.

Military reasons heretofore have prevented accentuating the accemplishments of the Americans except in a most general manner. The dispatches from the fleid have been necessarily fragmentary and possibly were overshadowed by the accounts of the more dramatic operations over the historic battle fronts to the west.

But it now may be stated that 21 American divisions, totaling more than 750,000 American combat troops, participated in the action beginning Sept. 26, known variously as the battle of the Meuse, but which history may call Sedan—the battle that brought Germany to her knees and, as far as human foresight goes, ended the world's bloodiest and costliest war.

In order to understand the military situation which made the Argonne operations the crux of the war, it is necessary to go back to the reduction of the St. Milniel salient in the middle of September, This brilliant American accomplishment is still fresh in history. It cut off at one stroke a menacing enemy projection toward Verdun and wenkended the enemy's defensive by threatening Metz, one of Germany's two greatest advance railway centers and bases.

The outstanding feature of the Argonne foreste is a long chain of hills running north and south, covered with a dense growth of trees and undergrowth, making an advance difficult and offering superb defensive qualities. Virtually no roads exist in the forest, except for a few transversal passes running east and west. The noil is such that the least rain converts it into a slippery, miry mess. In other words, the physical condition is such that the line of attack for an advancing army is limited to valleys, chief among which is that of the Aire river.

Held Many Points. Held Many Points.

From the edge of the forest, where the resistance was viciously strong the enemy possessed innumerable flanking positions. But beyond this difficult region lay the Montmery-Sedan line, which was recently captured. A German order described it as "our life artery." It represented one half of the German rail supply on the western front. It meant death if cut.

The high command told Pershing to cut it. The American First army was put in motion from St. Mihiel. In nine days it was on the Argonne line ready for an attempt, the failure of which might mean disaster and the success of which would give untold results. This quick movement of an enormous body of men, the establishment of a new line of supply and all the complicated military preparations, was regarded with pride by the American commanders.

The Americans knew what confronted them. They realized that this was no second St. Mihiel, but an enterprise at which other armies had balked for four years. They knew that here was to be fought a fight to rank with the Somme and the Chemin des Dames; and they knew that on them depended the fate of the great attack on the rest of the front. If forced back here the enemy must give way to the west. If he held he could hold elsewhere. From the edge of the forest day. But the enemy was not taken wholly by surprise. The second day he threw into the line five counter-attack divisions he held in clone reserve. They were his best troops, but they failed not only to push the Americans back, but they failed to check the gradual advance of the Americans over the difficult terrain.

over the difficult terrain.

The first phase of the action ended Oct. 31, during which the American gains were not large, but they compelled the enemy to use a large number of divisions, which became slowly exhausted and thus were unable to parry the hammering he was receiving west.
It was bitter fighting in the woods brush and ravines over a region per-fectly registered and plotted by the enemy where his guns, big and little, could be used with the greatest effi-ciency. The original nine American divisions in some cases were kept in

With the conclusion of the St Milnier action, the steady inflow of American advance averaged five kilometers caused a displacement of power as between the allied and German armies. Thus it no longer was necessary to pursue a policy of reducing a salient or nibbling at it. American troops had shown what they could do. A broader policy of general attack along the entire line was then adopted and the high command called upon Gen. Pershing to take the Argonne sector, admittedly one of the most, if not the most, difficult of the whole front. The broken terrain, the topography and the lack of roads made it a problem difficult to describe. Germany had in four years fertified it to the last degree of military skill, with superb roads, both rall and motor, connecting up to the rear positions and bases.

The outstanding feature of the Artificial continuing the article had effected a break through. the first time in the war the enemy officially admitted that the American attack had effected a break through. The Americans knew that what finally when the armistice was signed, was only a question of days.

Last Monday morning the general commanding a certain division was called to the telephone in a far advanced position and asked if he had understood that hostilities were to have ceased at 11 oclock in the morning.

"Yes," replied the general, "I did. But at 10:38 we were going like heli."

"Autogo" was the rather suggestive name advanced by an early enthusiast as a suitable appellation for the motor
